

The basic instructions are simple; turn it on and state your intentions. I hold the Succor Punch in my right hand up by my heart chakra when I make my intentions. but I don't think that's a requirement. I'm pretty sure you would have the same good results if you put the Succor Punch under your foot, either one. Or in the next room. The point of this the ritual aspect. And making a connection with the Succor Punch.

When we follow a ritual when making intentions we are making stronger intentions. The Hindus use prayer wheels that spin and their vibrations carry the prayers into and through the Ether, which is everywhere, at once. It's a similar thing we are doing, just using a higher-tech tool.

Also, I state out-loud my intentions as I feel there's more power there. You can make as many intentions as you want, the universe can accommodate. The Succor Punch will broadcast your intent as long as it's turned on and the battery is well. If the battery dies or the unit is turned off, you need to program it again. The Succor Punch is like a little broadcasting radio, only it sends out your intentions instead of your voice.

We don't run them with wall current transformers because the 60Hz freq screws it up. Don Croft taught me this many years ago. The bad frequency bleeds through and ruins the 15HZ signal. Buy cheap 9 volt batteries at The Dollar Store, 99 Cent Store, etc.

Once you've programmed your Succor Punch you don't need to have it on your person, but it should be nearby. If you set your programming in the morning, as the day goes by, whenever you remember the intentions, think of your Succor Punch, see it in your mind if not your sight and give the program a mental boost. Re-affirm the intentions in your mind, boosting the message's strength.

There are other ways to program the Succor Punch. You can type your intentions on paper and wrap it around or place it under your Succor Punch. That works. Doing this along with vocal intentioning is probably more effective. It's all ritual, which powerfully boosts what you're doing. You can devise your own rituals, methodology. The point is that your intentions, through your will, is being broadcast into the Ether (everywhere) through the scaler wave produced by the Succor Punch. That's it.

Experiment. Try different rituals until you become comfortable with it, I think you'll know when that moment arrives.

If I were to give any advice, it would be to wish no harm. If you are plagued by negative entities, sending them love is what messes with them the best. Sending unconditional love from your heart chakra, through a Succor Punch is very, very powerful.
